

INVOLVED

DOES YOUR INITIATIVE GIVE PEOPLE THE OPPORTUNITY TO PARTICIPATE IN YOUR INITIATIVE AND IN SOCIETY?

GOOD EXAMPLES

A social-sportive initiative gives people in vulnerable situations the opportunity to participate as volunteers. Or it offers them an recreational animator course that volunteers can follow. The volunteers learn new skills, which they can also apply in another initiatives, clubs, or at work.

An initiative encourages participants to organise an activity themselves. In doing so, it motivates them to learn new things, try different hobbies or start their own initiative.

"WE TRY TO ENGAGE PEOPLE IN VULNERABLE SITUATIONS IN OTHER INITIATIVES AS WELL. THIS CAN BE AS A VOLUNTEER OR IN A PAID JOB."

Many initiatives rely on the commitment of volunteers—through their time, knowledge, ideas, and even financial contributions. While this is great, volunteers often do not stay long. As a result, expertise is lost, and many initiatives feel like they constantly have to start from scratch.

REFLECT ON THESE QUESTIONS.

WRITE YOUR ANSWERS AND IDEAS HERE.

- What does your volunteer policy look like?
 - · How do you attract volunteers?
 - How do you support volunteers?
 - How do you help volunteers move on to other initiatives?
- Which volunteers can be ambassadors or role models for your initiative?
 Consider volunteers both within and outside your initiative.
- How can you retain the experience and expertise of volunteers within your organisation?
- How can you collaborate with partners to recruit volunteers?

